Children in healthcare settings often face variety of limitations due to illness, treatment, and surgery. Over the past few years, they have also coped with the additional restrictions brought by the Covid-19 pandemic.

Even with those limitations, what has been and will always be unlimited is their potential strength, connecting with others even while physically separated, expressing feelings that cannot be expressed in words, imagining the invisible, discovering and creating fun and joy in any situation, living in the present and hoping for the future.

Spreading their wings of imagination, children can express their colorful feelings and demonstrate their unique strength through art just like flowers of various colors and shapes.
